Ca. 1925 D-Rad R 04 500cc side valve frame 7439 engine 15930

D-Rad motorcycles were produced between 1921 and 1933 by the Berlin-Based Deutsche Industrierwerke and designed by the engineer Christiansen.

The machines were nicknamed "Springboks from Spandau" and constitute the archetype of 1920's German motorcycle design: sturdy, strong and well-built.

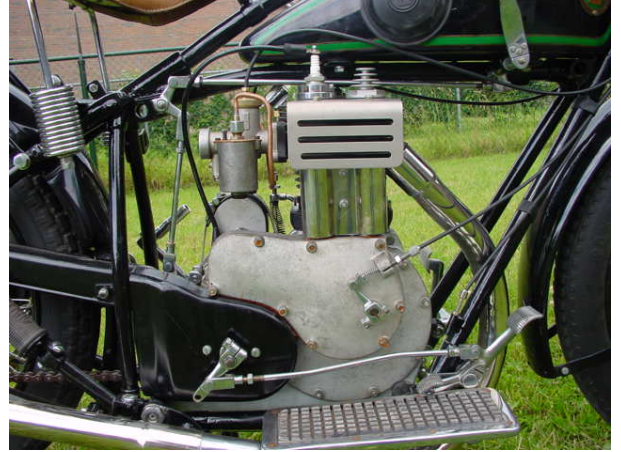

This R04 has a 497 (82x94) unit construction engine, hand -operated three speed gearbox and trailing link front forks with leaf spring suspension.

The slender tank shape gives the machine elegant looks.

This machine is a well-restored example of German motorcycle design.
