Morgan 4/4 was the Morgan Motor Company's first car with four wheels.

It appeared in 1936.

Its model designation "4-4" (later "4/4") stood for four wheels and four cylinders.

Earlier Morgans had been three-wheelers, only, typically with V-twin engines.

Apart from a break during World War II (and the period March 1951 to September 1955) the 4/4 has been in continuous production from its debut right up to the present day.

Engine capacity has increased from the 1122cc Coventry Climax engine in 1936 to a 1.8 litre Ford Zetec engine in 2000.
