1937 Norton Model 30 "International" 490cc OHC frame # 65460

One of the most charismatic model names in motorcycling history,

'International' was first used by Norton for its top-of-the-range sports roadster in 1932.

The Inter's Arthur Carroll-designed overhead-camshaft engine had been developed in the works racers for the preceding two years, and although it retained the classic 79x100mm bore/stroke dimensions and shaft-and-bevels cam drive of the existing CS1, was entirely new. Based on the works bikes and intended for racing, the International could nevertheless be ordered with refinements such as lights and a kickstart-equipped gearbox.

By the time production halted in 1939 it was being built with a four-speed foot-change 'box and plunger rear suspension (the 'Garden Gate' frame), reappearing after the war in similar guise save for the adoption of the hydraulically-damped Roadholder front fork, which replaced the pre-war girder.

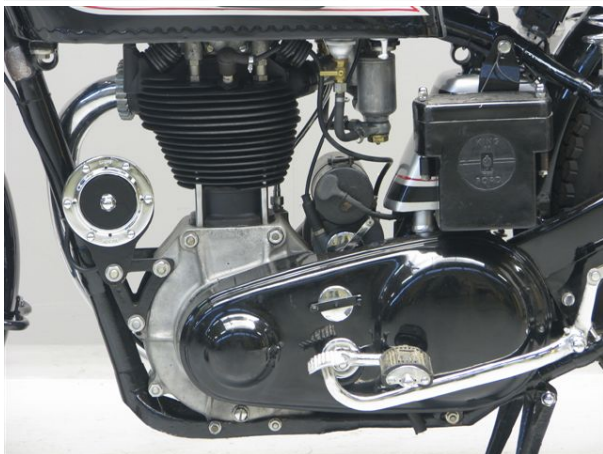

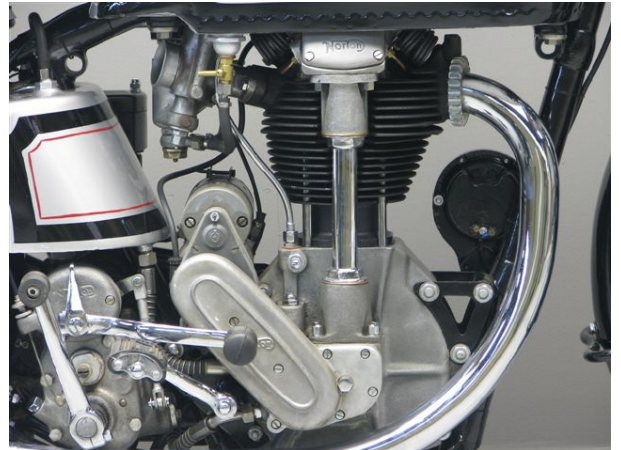

Owned by the former owner for the past 30 years, this superb Inter was totally restored by him three years ago upon his retirement (the machine's previous history is not known).

The restoration encompassed the engine, gearbox, brakes, paintwork, wheels and tyres, while all parts are reported as original.

Today this rare landmark model is one of the most sought after of all Norton motorcycles.
