In the early years of the new century the company started to develop motorized bicycles and soon Saroléa was a force to reckon with: around 1907 the firm employed some 200 labourers and had 4000 m² of production facilities.

In the early years of the century Saroléas were sold in Britain under the "Kerry" brand..

Both singles and V twins were made and the firm supplied engines to a number of firms in several

In turn, Saroléa used a number of British components such as Sturmey Archer gearboxes and AMAC carburettors.

In the 20s the firm got successfully involved with long distance runs, reliability trials and hill climbs.

The first OHV model, a 500 cc was presented for the 1924 season.

This " 23 G Super Sport" could reach a speed of 120 km/ h.

One year later a 350 cc version was presented, the " 25 H Super Sport".

This attractive and very original vintage sportsman's machine has bore and stroke dimensions of 75x79 mm, is equipped with Sturmey Archer 3 speed gearbox and has a top speed of 110 km/h.
